Sermon
35:00	Beginning Again: Authority Scott	November 1, 2020 // Authority // Genesis 1:28; 2:15, 20 What if I told you it is impossible to flourish without order and authority? Furthermore, what if I told you Jesus was and is delightfully under the authority of the Father? Are you aware of the fact that once all enemies of God have been subjected under the feet of Jesus Christ, that Jesus Himself will “also will be subjected to the One who subjected all things to Him, so that God may be all in all” (1 Corinthians 15:28). What this means is that any authority we have is derived. It is not ours as a permanent possession, but a temporary trust. It is on loan to us from God. It is not a power to use over others, but a power to responsibly enable others to thrive. For us it begins in the Garden of Eden, where man is told to both subdue and cultivate the earth. It is further implicit in the act of naming. Far from being an enemy, authority rightly defined and responsibly used is our friend. It provides the order we so desperately need in a world that, without godly authority, always spins back toward chaos.
